

Cloudy Tonight; Temperature About 26 Degrees.

The Washington Times

FINAL EDITION

NUMBER 7647.

Yesterday's Circulation, 45,037

WASHINGTON, THURSDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 28, 1912.

Fourteen Pages

PRICE ONE CENT.

SIX DEAD, 50 HURT, AS TRAIN HITS BRIDGE

Fast Express Strikes Sagging Overhead Structure and Rolls Into Ditch.

PULLMAN EMPLOYEES ARE KNOWN VICTIMS

Man Penned in Overturned Car Tells Thrilling Story of Fight for Life.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 28.—A weakened overhead trestle on the Pennsylvania main line twenty miles west of Philadelphia, at Glen Lock, buckled and derailed the Cleveland and Cincinnati express at 11:40 last night.

Six dead have been recovered, or are in sight of the rescuers, and the list of injured will reach fifty, a dozen of whom will probably die. It is feared that the death list will be increased as the wreckage is cleared.

The train was running late behind a double-header, and between 250 and 275 people were on the nine Pullmans and two coaches which plunged down a thirty-five-foot embankment and smashed into a cut of loaded steel coal cars. Only the solid steel Pullmans prevented the loss of life reaching into scores.

List of Dead.
J. E. COLLINS, of Buffalo, N. Y.
H. L. BALDWIN, New York, Pullman conductor.
EDWARD JONES, New York, Pullman conductor.
L. D. FINLEY, of Squirrel Hill, Pa.
List of Injured.
Charles B. Van Horn, Philadelphia.
Miss Elizabeth Faldender, New York.
Miss G. Zith, Ohio.
Mrs. H. Gregg, Trenton, N. J.
Miss Carrie Gregg, Trenton, N. J.
J. Kaufman, New York.
Samuel Davis, New York.
Harry C. Murphy, Brooklyn, N. Y.
W. B. Ironsall, West Chester, Pa.
Sreman.
Albert Walter, Somerset, Pa., broken arm.
E. B. Burns, Pittsburgh, Pa., back broken.
T. F. Matz, New York, porter on Pullman, back broken.
Mrs. O. B. Hahnub and daughter Ruth, of New York.
Bertram Bush, Harrisburg.
Rev. F. P. G. Wilson, missionary from Persia, on way to Indiana.
L. H. Scott, Cadis, Ohio.
Mrs. John Hickey, Altoona, Pa.
B. B. Packard, Pittsburgh, arm slightly injured.
William Dietrich, Cleveland, both feet injured.
Mrs. William Dietrich, Cleveland, bruised on body.
D. G. Cavellena, Philadelphia, cut about face.
W. D. Shipley, Wilkesburg, Pa., sprained back.
M. H. Lewis, Louisville, Ky., sprained ankle and contusions.
J. W. Leonard, Washington, Pa., sprained back and contusions of nose.
Mrs. Elizabeth Satterly, New York, face cut and hip hurt.
E. S. Wilson, Indiana, Pa., slightly hurt.
A. R. Jones, New York city, a New York Central traveling passenger agent, will die.
J. H. Browning, New York; fractured clavicle.
Mrs. Bertram Bush, Harrisburg; back injured.
Charles Goldberg, New York; arm sprained.
Charles E. Grav, Hagerstown, Md.; contusions of arm.
H. P. Hoke, Harrisburg; jaw and back crushed.
Mrs. Charles Hosko, Cleveland, Ohio; fractured rib.

The overhead trestle is on the Pennsylvania main line and spans a freight road of the same system. The terrific impact of the heavy fast trains have weakened the east abutment, and it was this end of the structure which sagged at least eighteen inches.

It is presumed that when the heavy double engine hit the trestle that the end dropped, and while the whole train passed over the structure all the rails were sheered off of the structure, the ties splintered and the heavy guard planking ground into bits.

The two engines and the mail car involved.

(Continued on Fourth Page.)

WEATHER REPORT.

FORECAST FOR THE DISTRICT.
Cloudy tonight; temperature about 26 degrees.

TEMPERATURES.

U. S. BUREAU. APPLES. 32
8 a. m. 32 8 a. m. 32
9 a. m. 32 9 a. m. 32
10 a. m. 32 10 a. m. 32
11 a. m. 32 11 a. m. 32
12 noon 32 12 noon 32
1 p. m. 32 1 p. m. 32
2 p. m. 32 2 p. m. 32

TIDE TABLE.

Today—High tide, 10:40 a. m. and 11 p. m.; low tide, 4:54 a. m. and 5:54 p. m.

Tomorrow—High tide, 11:35 a. m. and 11:55 p. m.; low tide, 5:48 a. m. and 6:54 p. m.

SUN TABLE.

Sun rises..... 6:56; Sun sets..... 5:40

Died This Morning

—Photo by G. V. Buck.
COL. DAN MOORE RANDELL.
Sergeant-at-Arms of Senate.

COLONEL RANDELL, SERGEANT-AT-ARMS, CALLED BY DEATH

Senate Official Is Victim of Angina Pectoris at Garfield Hospital.

Col. Daniel Moore Ransdell, Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States Senate, died suddenly at 4:30 o'clock this morning in Garfield Hospital. Angina pectoris, from which he had suffered intermittently for two years, seized him in the midst of a sound sleep, and he expired in a few minutes.

Four weeks ago Colonel Ransdell was operated upon for bladder trouble by Mrs. F. R. Hagner and B. L. Hardin, and he had practically recovered from this affection, and was planning to leave the hospital in a few days. His wife and daughter, Miss Charlotte Ransdell, found him in a cheerful frame of mind last night, and did not bid farewell to him until a late hour. At that time there were no signs of a recurrence of the angina pectoris which suddenly seized him.

Chosen in 1900.
The death of this veteran of the Senate, who was chosen to his present position in 1900, just after the re-election of President McKinley, removes a picturesque figure from Washington life, one whose place will not easily be filled. He was seventy years of age, had lost his right arm in a civil war engagement, and was a noted figure in the public life of Indiana before he came to Washington.

Colonel Ransdell had the honor of having served as Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate longer than any other man who has held that office since 1833. Two officials who held the position prior to 1833 exceeded him in length of tenure. He was chosen to his position in 1900, and had held the place continuously since. Previous to coming to Washington as Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, however, he was well-known in Washington because of his intimate friendship with President Benjamin Harrison. This led to his appointment as marshal of the District of Columbia, and he held the position from 1899 to 1904.

Born in Indiana.
Colonel Ransdell was born near Indianapolis. He attended school in the country in winter and worked on a farm in the summer until he was sixteen years old. At that age he entered Franklin College and remained there three years. He taught school during the summer while taking his college course. At the outbreak of the civil war he left college to enter the Union Army. He served as a non-commissioned officer until May, 1864. At the battle of Resaca, May 15, 1864, he lost his right arm. He then was given and honorable discharge from the army.

On leaving his military life he took

(Continued on Fourth Page.)

CALEB POWERS TAKES BRIDE IN KENTUCKY

Congressman Weds Girl Who Was Loyal Through Trial—On Way to Capital.

Washington friends of Congressman Caleb Powers, of Kentucky, are deeply interested in his wedding to Miss Anna Dorothy Kufman yesterday in Newport, Ky., after a romance which began when Powers was behind prison bars in connection with the assassination of Governor William Goebel.

Congressman Powers is now on his way to the Capital with his bride. He was a girl in her teens when she first met Powers in the long and memorable trial growing out of the charges against him relating to the assassination of the governor. She is a native of Newport, and although Mr. Powers did not meet her for some time after his great fight for freedom, it is said she fell in love with him when he was confined in prison.

Mrs. Goebel is reported to be wealthy, and is expected she will take a prominent part in southern circles in this city.

TURKS NULLIFY CONSTITUTION; IS REVOLUTION

Cabinet Abrogates Pact of Four Years As Unsatisfactory.

NEW PARTY FAILED TO REFORM NATION

Peace Negotiations With Bulgaria Still Are Being Carried On.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 28.—The cabinet today decided to abrogate the Turkish constitution, declaring that, after nearly four years' trial, it has proved wholly unsatisfactory.

In the general excitement over the war, Constantinople did not seem to realize at first that the government's announcement amounted to nothing less than another revolution.

Preparations for the step had been made very carefully. For days the authorities have been quietly gathering in the young Turkish leaders and transferring them to places of confinement on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus. Constitutionalists in high army posts have been gradually weeded out, and men who were known to believe popular government poorly adapted to Turkish requirements put in their places.

Opposed Young Turks.

Nasim Pasha, the minister of war and active commander of the army, has always opposed the Young Turks. He was the ablest man in the Young Turkish organization has been in Tripoli since soon after the outbreak of the war with Italy.

Today's coup evidently was the result of long, careful planning. Everything indicated that the absolutists had been awaiting their opportunity for months. The war with the Balkan allies furnished this opportunity.

The Young Turks were wonderfully clever as conspirators, but none of them had administrative ability. Instead of devoting themselves to the business of real reform when they gained control of the government, they played politics. They were theorists, and each had a different theory of government which he insisted on trying.

The result was complete disorganization of governmental machinery. The war, by revealing the almost unbelievable thoroughness with which they had wrecked one of the finest military establishments in the world, proved to everyone their incompetency.

Change For Better.

Even those who originally favored constitutional government could not but admit today that any change from Young Turkish rule would be an improvement. For the present, at any rate, it seemed unlikely that the latest revolution would meet with the least opposition. That the change will mean anything to the present Sultan was considered very unlikely. He has been ever since his elevation to the throne a puppet in the hands of whatever group was in control of the government, and probably will serve the absolutists as satisfactorily as he did the constitutionalists when they were in power.

It was considered wholly improbable that Abdul Hamid would be recalled. The man now at the helm, though foes of constitutionalism were not generally in favor of the deposed Sultan, Kiamil Pasha, the grand vizier and Nasim Pasha, the commander-in-chief of the army, were allies during most of his reign.

Talk on Peace Pact.

Negotiations between the Turkish and Bulgarian peace emissaries were still in progress today. Officialdom here inclined to think an agreement would be reached ultimately and that Turkey will lose very little by it. Drawing reinforcements steadily from Asia, the Ottoman forces are growing stronger daily. The allies, on the other hand, having put forth every ounce of strength at the beginning of hostilities are now rapidly weakening, according to the Turkish account.

It was also asserted, despite denials from the allies' capitals, that the league is torn by dissensions. The quarrel between the Bulgarians and Greeks concerning possession of Salonika began the difficulty and the fight which ensued it was maintained positively here that there was a fight, though formal denials were issued when the Serres from the Bulgarians made the breach hopeless.

The Bulgarians were also said to be complaining that if the Servians had come to their assistance at Chatala instead of becoming involved in a dispute with Austria, Constantinople might have been captured.

14 Hunters Slain.
BANGOR, Me., Nov. 28.—Fewer deer than ever before were slain in the Maine woods during the hunting season, but twelve were killed and fourteen wounded when "mistaken for deer."

Start of Procession, Pan-American Mass, and Cardinal

BANDIT CAPTURED ABOARD CAR AFTER ELUDING POSSES

Bandaged Hand Betrays "Angie" Hardy, and He Admits His Identity.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 28.—"Angie" Hardy, aged twenty-five, the colored bandit, who was with his brother French Hardy, when the latter was killed last Saturday in the attempted hold-up of Lee C. Inskip, an aged farmer, near Romney, W. Va., was captured in Cumberland early this morning without trouble after having eluded posses since the crime was committed.

The colored man was arrested by Chief of Police Irvine at the car barn, while on an interurban car. The police had a tip that a suspect was on the car traveling in this direction. Hardy's bandaged hand gave him away, and when taken into custody he at once admitted his identity and talked freely of the crime.

Hardy taught school two years in Hampshire county and one year in Mineral county, W. Va. On Thursday last he met his brother, French Hardy, who had previously worked with him in Columbus. Prior to the meeting the attempt to rob Inskip was not thought of. Hardy says he often saw his pursuers, and that yesterday two men with shot guns suddenly came down upon him in the mountains near Greengrass, W. Va. They were out hunting, but Hardy thought they were after him. He says they fed in one direction in apparent fear of him and he went the other.

He says he did not come to Cumberland with the direct view of giving himself up, but thought he probably would be detected and would thus fall into the hands of officers who would protect him and not permit a lynching. The police station was jammed all morning with people who came to see the prisoner.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW FADES AS FAST AS IT FALLS ON CITY

Fierce Storm Is Raging in New York and New England Today.

A fierce snowstorm is raging in New York city this afternoon, the flurry that passed through Washington early this morning moving northward gained force, and is extending the snow area throughout the northern Atlantic States.

The weather bureau characterizes the snow as falling in South Carolina and Georgia, and gradually passed to the North. Snow fell in South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, and Virginia in the past twenty-four hours, and this afternoon the storm center had reached New York State.

In the middle West the weather is fair, but in the Northwest a snowstorm broke this afternoon, and a blizzard, probably reaching the Middle States tomorrow night or Saturday.

The Washington "ever beautiful" did not last long, as a band of near-Indian summer is on the program, according to the weather sharks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The general snowstorm which yesterday swept over the Texas Panhandle and the northern part of Canada with a depth of snow, and a few feet down on New York city today. Driven by a brisk north-westerly wind, the snow filled the air and presented a real old-fashioned "blowing snow" appearance.

The usual Thanksgiving "munitions parade," made up for the most part of children dressed in fantastic costumes, was seen up and down the city streets, with which to purchase Thanksgiving goodies, was a feature of the day here. There were the usual church services and elaborate dinners served by many charitable organizations.

SOCIETY PLEASSED OVER ROMANCE OF BRAZILIAN ENVOY

Had Watched Courtship of Widow Whom He Wed Yesterday.

Washington society has simply burst into raptures over the cute little romance of Domíngos da Gama, minister extraordinary and plenipotentiary from Brazil, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bell Hearn, widow of the dry goods merchant Arthur Hearn, of New York.

With all the secretiveness and ardor of a twenty-year-old youth scaling the back wall of a convent to carry off his sixteen-year-old sweetheart, the staid ambassador from Brazil and the wealthy and popular widow of forty-two, guarded their romance, only a tiny ray of light on the subject peeping out here and there.

Everyone said it just had to be, from the very start, but the really cute thing about it is how the ambassador got away with the romance all by himself; that is, all alone except for his two stout cohorts of the embassy staff, J. F. de Barros Pimentel, second secretary, and J. J. Moniz de Aragao, another second secretary.

So diligent was the ambassador in his efforts to turn the tide of popular magic from his love affair, that even the United States Secret Service might have been unwittingly, to say nothing of the society writers of local and New York papers.

"Nothing in It," Said Ambassador.

The mere suggestion of what was going on behind the scenes at the embassy leaked out about a week ago, and diplomatic inquiries were made. His excellency, then in New York, sent out a man to investigate, and the man, word from his private study in the embassy here, that there "was nothing in it." Pimentel disavowed all knowledge of Cupid in the midst of the embassy staff. Mr. Aragao had heard still less about such a thing.

But the truth grew warm. A social detective again appeared at the embassy door, and asked about the health of the ambassador. With utter disregard for gas bills, every light in the embassy was turned on, and the detective was told that the ambassador was in the city.

The master, learning of Kim's ignominious position, hastened to the point to get the big terrier out before the heartless men there should send him to summer climates by way of the chloroform route.

Nai Choate presented his card to the poundmaster, and this proved to be the magic key to unlock the place and free Kim. If the poundmaster had refused to give Kim up it might have precipitated an international question of gravity.

Choate said today that he had had no trouble in getting Kim out, and had not been asked to pay the usual fee charged to first offenders.

But to prevent any possible difficulty in the future, Choate now muzzles Kim with a heavy cage, from which escape is impossible.

PRESIDENT AND PAUPER PRAISE THEIR CREATOR

Thanksgiving Day Observances in Capital Include Chief Executive and Prisoners in Jail.

PAN-AMERICAN MASS DRAWS STATESMEN TO WORSHIP

Over a land blessed with prosperity and peace, in the Capital of a great nation and in its far-away places, the spirit of another Thanksgiving rests like a benediction to day.

Official edict and papers of state make this a national holiday. Its real observance, however, springs from grateful hearts, nation-old custom, and the common realization that for another twelve months the Creator has continued their kindnesses.

The President of the United States and the humblest of its ninety million inhabitants kneel in prayer upon the footstool of the Giver of all earthly possessions; the unfortunate behind prison bars is made to feel that after all there is something left for which he may be thankful; the poor have a fleeting glimpse of better things; church bells carry a message of gratitude in every city and hamlet, and men and women, whatever be their estate, may contritely appreciate the answer to an oft-repeated prayer—"give us this day our daily bread."

PRESIDENT AND DIPLOMATS ATTEND.

Thanksgiving Day had an especial significance in Washington. Here at the seat of Government, the Chief Executive, the lawmakers, the interpreters of law, the representatives of every phase of official life, joined hands and hearts in services at St. Patrick's Church.

Surrounding President Taft, the justices of the Supreme Court, members of Congress and church dignitaries, sat the diplomatic envoys of foreign nations, large and small. The Pan-American mass, now a fixture on the program of the annual thanksgiving, was observed with all the solemnity, and yet all the humility of former years, and in accordance with its underlying motive.

CELEBRATION NATION-WIDE.

In other churches less pretentious, in cities removed from association with officialdom, in little homes where the acquaintances of a neighborhood met together to observe the day in their own peculiar way, the national spirit of praise and thanksgiving prevailed.

None was too poor and none too rich to cease for the time the pursuit of daily routine and to dedicate one day of the three hundred and sixty-five to the Giver of life and whatever it may hold. Pauper and plutocrat, laborer and employer, the weak and the strong, and the fortunate and less fortunate joined in a celebration and ceremony not founded on creed, race or class.

Everyone said it just had to be, from the very start, but the really cute thing about it is how the ambassador got away with the romance all by himself; that is, all alone except for his two stout cohorts of the embassy staff, J. F. de Barros Pimentel, second secretary, and J. J. Moniz de Aragao, another second secretary.

So diligent was the ambassador in his efforts to turn the tide of popular magic from his love affair, that even the United States Secret Service might have been unwittingly, to say nothing of the society writers of local and New York papers.

"Nothing in It," Said Ambassador.

The mere suggestion of what was going on behind the scenes at the embassy leaked out about a week ago, and diplomatic inquiries were made. His excellency, then in New York, sent out a man to investigate, and the man, word from his private study in the embassy here, that there "was nothing in it." Pimentel disavowed all knowledge of Cupid in the midst of the embassy staff. Mr. Aragao had heard still less about such a thing.

But the truth grew warm. A social detective again appeared at the embassy door, and asked about the health of the ambassador. With utter disregard for gas bills, every light in the embassy was turned on, and the detective was told that the ambassador was in the city.

The master, learning of Kim's ignominious position, hastened to the point to get the big terrier out before the heartless men there should send him to summer climates by way of the chloroform route.

Nai Choate presented his card to the poundmaster, and this proved to be the magic key to unlock the place and free Kim. If the poundmaster had refused to give Kim up it might have precipitated an international question of gravity.

Choate said today that he had had no trouble in getting Kim out, and had not been asked to pay the usual fee charged to first offenders.

But to prevent any possible difficulty in the future, Choate now muzzles Kim with a heavy cage, from which escape is impossible.